

MISCELLANY.

From the N. Y. Mirror.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS, OR NOTES BY THE WAY.
BY NATHANIEL P. WILLIS.

Visit from King Otho and Miaulis—visits an English and Russian frigate.

Napoli di Romania.—Went ashore with one of the officers, to look for the fountain of Canathus. Its waters had the property (vide Pausanias) of renewing the infant purity of the women who bathed in them. Juno used it once a year. We found but one natural spring in all Napoli. It stands in a narrow street filled with tailors, and is adorned with a marble foot bearing a Turkish inscription. Two girls were drawing water in skins. We drank a little of it, but found nothing peculiar in the taste. Its virtues are confined probably to the other sex.

The king visited the ship. As his barge left the pier, the vessels of war in the harbour manned their yards and fired the royal salute. He was accompanied by young Bozaris and the prince, his uncle, and dressed in the same uniform in which he received us at our presentation. As he stepped on the deck, and was received by Commodore Patterson, I thought I had never seen a more elegant and well-proportioned man. The frigate was in her usual admirable order, and the king expressed his surprise and gratification at every turn. His questions were put with uncommon judgment for a lands-man. We had heard, indeed, on board the English frigate which brought him from Trieste, that he lost no opportunity of learning the duties and management of the ship, keeping watch with the midshipmen, and running from one deck to the other at all hours. After going thoroughly through the ship, the Commodore presented him to his family. He seemed very much pleased with the ease and frankness with which he was received, and seating himself with our fair country-women in the after-cabin, prolonged his visit to a very unceremonious length, conversing with the most unreserved glibness. The yards were manned again, the salutes fired once more, and the king of Greece tossed his oars for a moment under the stern, and pulled astern.

Had the pleasure and honor of showing Miaulis through the ship. The old man came on board very modestly, without even announcing himself, and as he addressed one of the officers in Italian, I was struck with his noble appearance, and offered my services as interpreter. He was dressed in the Hydriote costume, the full blue trousers gathered at the knee, a short open jacket worked with black braid, and a red skull-cap. His lieutenant, dressed in the same costume, a tall, superb-looking Greek, was his only attendant. He was quite at home on board, comparing the "United States" continually to the Hellas, the American-built frigate which he commanded. Every one on board was struck with the noble simplicity and dignity of his address.—I have seldom seen a man who impressed me more.—He requested me to express his pleasure at his visit, and his friendly feelings to the commodore, and invited us to his country-house, which he pointed out from the deck, just without the city. Every officer in the ship uncovered as he passed. The gratification at seeing him was universal. He looks worthy to be one of the "three" that Byron demanded, in his impassioned verse, "To make a new Thermopylae."

Returned visits of ceremony with the commodore, to the English and Russian vessels of war. The British frigate Madagascar is about the size of the United States, but not in nearly so fine a condition. The superior cleanliness and neatness of arrangement on board our own ship are indisputable. The cabin of Captain Lyon (who is said to be one of the best officers in the English service) was furnished in almost Oriental luxury, and what I should esteem more, crowded with the choicest books. He informed us that of his twenty-four midshipmen, nine were sons of noblemen, and possessed the best family influence on both father's and mother's side, and several of the remainder had high claims for preferment. There is small chance there, one would think, for commoners.

Captain Lyon spoke in the highest terms of his late passenger, King Otho, both as to disposition and talent. Somewhere in the Aegean, one of his Bavarian servants fell overboard, and the boatsman jumped after him, and sustained him till the boat was lowered to his relief. On his reaching the deck, the king drew a valuable repeater from his pocket, and presented it to him in the presence of the crew. He certainly has caught the "trick of royalty" in its perfection.

The guard presented, the boatsman "piped us over the side," and we pulled alongside the Russian. The file of marines drawn up in honor of the commodore on her quarter-deck, looked like so many standing bears. Features and limbs so brutally coarse I never saw.—The officers, however, were very gentlemanly, and the vessel was in beautiful condition. In inquiring after the health of the ladies on board our ship, the captain and his lieutenant rose from their seats and made a low bow—a degree of chivalrous courtesy very uncommon, I fancy, since the days of Sir Piercie Shafton. I left his imperial majesty's ship with an improved impression of him.

Execution of a Female in Persia.—A considerable crowd assembled before I arrived at the place of execution. In the centre was a brazen mortar, placed on a piece of rising ground—a match communicating with the interior of the mortar was at some distance, and not far from it was a fire-brand, ready lighted. I took my place with a heavy heart in the midst of the crowd, and I chose it at that distance which placed me out of all probability of danger. Scarcely had I stopped when I saw the officer of justice approach, for whom the guards opened a passage with difficulty, and not without dealing some blows among the throng. Between two of them advanced the condemned person. From her head to her feet she was covered with a thick black veil, to hide her face. Her step was firm, and her expressive countenance seemed unmoved. She often spoke to an eunuch who accompanied her, but the noise around prevented my hearing a word she uttered. However, as she drew near to the place of punishment, the spectators became profoundly silent; and when she arrived at the mortar not a breath was heard. She took the advantage of the silence to raise her voice and address the multitude, with a precision and clearness which excited universal astonishment. But the officers, perceiving the impression that she produced on the standers by, soon interrupted her. She made no effort to continue, and suffered herself to be taken close to the mortar; her step was firm, she did not pray, she did not speak, but appeared more resigned than many men would be in the same situation, she did not even shed a tear. She was told to kneel down, and lean her head against the mouth of the mortar. She obeyed. Her wrists were bound with a cord, and they were firmly tied to some pickets that had been purposely placed there. In the mean time she did not discover the least emotion. She leaned her head on the mortar, and awaited her fate with the calmness that the bravest soldier might envy. At length the signal was given. A man armed with the fire-brand, bent it slowly to the match, and just as it was about to take fire, a shudder took place among the crowd. The match was lighted; one moment only had passed; a dead groan issued from every bosom; the smoke disappeared; there was no explosion; and the unhappy creature raised her head to see what had happened. A rapid beam of hope shot across my breast; I thought it was meant that she should be saved. Scarcely had this idea entered my mind, when another brand was lighted. The victim raised her head a second time, and gave a deep sigh, as if her soul had just taken its flight; this long, this dreadful sigh, had scarcely finished, when the explosion took place, and the smoke of the powder hid every object from sight. The fatal cloud, however, was soon dispersed; the explosion had finished, all was annihilated, except a few shreds of her garments, and the bones of her arms. Two women rushed forward at the fatal moment towards the scene of punishment, seized the remains, and hiding them with their veils, hastily returned to their harem, carrying off those dreadful testimonies of the fulfillment of a sanguinary judgment.—By an Eye Witness.

COMMERCIAL HOUSE.

No. 34 COMMERCIAL STREET, BOSTON.

JOHN E. HUNT begs leave to inform his friends and the public, that the above House is now open as a Summer Establishment. Having had a long experience in keeping a genteel "Restaurateur," and eating house, he flatters himself that the reputation which he has gained will ensure him a liberal patronage.

Clubs, Parties, Engine and Fire Companies, can be accommodated at short notice, with every thing which the season affords. Coffee, Soups and refreshments, at all hours, and the Bar will be found stocked with the best of Liquors and Wines.

Merchants in the neighborhood of Commercial wharf, Ship Masters, and the numerous business men in that part of the city, are respectfully invited to call and inspect the conveniences and accommodations of the place.

The House has been fitted up for an extensive but private Boarding House. Gentlemen intending to take the Southern Packets at the neighboring Ships, and Country Traders, will find airy rooms, good accommodations and prompt attendance, convenient to their business, and at the same time retired, comfortable, and "at home."

J. E. H. pledges himself to devote his undivided attention to the establishment, and will ensure the public an orderly, well conducted house.

STONE HOUSE! IN LOWELL. This elegant Mansion is now open for the reception of Boarders and Strangers. The "Stone House" needs no recommendation to those who have formerly visited it. It stands on the southern bank of the Merrimack River, about a quarter of a mile from the business part of the town of Lowell, fronting on the main road leading from Lowell westward, and having a Piazza in rear which immediately overlooks "Pawtucket Falls," and commands a delightful and extensive prospect up and down the River.

No situation in this country combines greater advantages for a Summer residence, or resort of parties of pleasure. To many it will be some recommendation at this season, that excellent Salads are taken in the Falls at this place. The admirers of mechanical art and power will not forget its vicinity in the most important and interesting of the Manufacturing towns in New England. The lovers of natural scenery will remember its elevated and commanding site, perfectly secluded from the noise and business of the town.

The subscriber has fitted up and furnished the House at a liberal expense, and relying upon considerable experience in his business, and the utmost care and attention, hopes to be able to furnish his customers with the most reasonable expectation of all who may be pleased to favor it with their patronage.

THURSDAY, JUNE 26, 1834.

STENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS.—No 174.

Washington, June 21, 1834.—The lamented death of the good LAFAYETTE was announced this morning to both Houses, by an Executive Message, recommending the adoption of measures expressive of the deep sense of the nation on the melancholy event. In the House, Mr Adams offered a resolution, appointing a committee on the subject. In the Senate one was appointed on motion—and, at the suggestion of Mr Forsyth, fixed at 13 in number, in allusion to the original confederacy. It was first proposed to ballot for the committee, but finally left to the nomination of the chair. The committee will report, it is understood, on Monday. It is hardly probable much ceremony will take place, as Congress is so much pressed with business, that little time can be spared for any other call—however momentous. I could have wished, that out of respect to the memory of one of the earliest and latest, and most constant friends of America and American freedom, the two Houses would have adjourned, and lowered their flags half-mast. It is too late now to do this—but, doubtless, the nation will do justice to his memory and virtues. Probably on Monday, Mr Adams will be prepared with an eulogy. No man in the country is so prompt, and so well qualified for such a duty. Whether any one from the Senate will follow his example, I know not. I presume both Houses may probably unite in commemorating the event.

The Senate were engaged a great portion of the day in discussing an item in the appropriation bill, providing for the publication of Clark and Force's Documentary History of the U. States. The Vicks undertook to censure Mr. Livingston, late Secretary of State for making a contract, which was obliged by law to make, without limitation, though there was no limitation in the law. No portion of the work is yet printed, I understand; and, it is said, under the contract, it might extend to more than a million of dollars. Mr Clay seemed to be a little posed on the subject, and thought it might be as well to "compromise" the matter—a favorite way of doing business with him,—by giving the "low" contracting party 25 or $30,000, or else to appropriate this sum for the present year, and see a sample of the work. I am not sure that I entirely understood him, but have an impression that he leaned to a compromise. Much was said against this law and the contract, as being unconstitutional; and I think there can be little doubt of it, especially as those who advocate the measure draw their authority from the example of Great Britain, which certainly is no authority to us and our constitution in these matters. Mr Forsyth, if I rightly understood him, stated a startling fact on this point; he said that the Congress that had passed this Documentary law, had passed laws at the same session providing for the printing of works for their own use, that would cost 90,000 dollars, if completed. He was dead against the present project. Mr King, his colleague, made a short but sound argument against it; and placed the thing in a most ludicrous light by one of his original analogies. He said it was confessed that this work would never be printed unless Congress patronized it; and in doing it they set up a printing shop to supply the members with books, when they had no more right to do it, than they had to set up a milliner's shop. This made the ladies giggle! Mr Hill made an able and cutting speech against it; attributing to the Honorable body an intention to indemnify the printers who lost money in supporting them. Mr Force formerly printed the National Journal. He did not spare the two opposition presses in this city. He always deals in facts, and they are stubborn things. The Vicks were so little prepared for his speech, that they had not time to retreat into the recess, as usual. Mr Preston was willing justice should be done to the contractors. Mr Clay wanted the faith of the government maintained; Leigh was a little on both sides, and in favor of neither; Webster said a few words, merely to say he should not consider it now; he always postpones things like Felix, to a more convenient season; and the Vicks, I fear, following his example, will postpone his political claims, in like manner. Mr Chambers pressed the matter in favor of the utility of the publication; and Mr Frelinghuysen groaned an ejaculation or two in favor of the Ex-Printer of the Ex-National Journal. It is of little moment how the Senate settles the question; the House will not be likely to be very prodigal of the public money to any old-Ex-National who call upon them to pay him for heating his political poker. The Senate passed to other items in the appropriation bill, and finally made most of the amendments that will be called for. On Monday, they will probably send the bill to the House. They went on through the day in quite a business-like manner.

In the House an unsuccessful motion was made to set aside the rules, and call up Mr Polk's Deposit Bill, not quite two thirds voting for the motion. Mr White's Gold Bill came up, and underwent an animated discussion, the one regulating the value of American gold. Mr Gorham offered an amendment, and advocated it; but it was lost by a vote of 112 to 69. He entertained the opinion that this currency could not become general; as he thought paper currency more convenient, and less likely to be lost; and that it was not possible to change the value of gold, by raising the standard. The bill, making the standard value, compared to silver as 16 to 1, passed just at the going down of the sun, by a triumphant majority of 145 to 36, Mr Adams voting for it. The bill also, regulating foreign gold coins, passed without opposition. As the last rays of the setting sun flashed upon the scene, I could not but call to mind a passage in my favorite author, which seemed appropriate to the occasion.

The glorious sun hath made a golden set!
And, by your ruddy brightness of the clouds,
Gives token of a goodly day to-morrow.

REIS EFFENDI.

We are happy to see it publicly announced that William Simmons Esq., James Cushing and William A. White, of the firm of Cushing, White & Co., and Thos. Brewer Esq. of Roxbury did not sign the Boston Anti Bank Memorial. No one knowing the parties would have expected to see their names there. Other gentlemen, however, who have the like names, did sign it. In relation to White, if we are rightly informed, he was at the Anti Bank meeting at Faneuil Hall, on the evening that the Bank partisans attempted the riot, and were marked and trundled down stairs. The Bank papers, apparently incapable of stating any thing truly, in printing even this list of names have, either from design or carelessness, misspelled and misprinted a very large proportion of them, and now complain that they cannot be found on the ward lists.

The Bank memorial which went from this city has the names of many "men of straw," of minors and non-residents; among the latter, that of Kirk Boot, of Lowell, the son of a British subject, and himself once an officer in the British Army—to attain which position, he must have sworn allegiance to the British King—truly, a worthy supporter of the British Bank, and a most worthy modern "Whig."

Maj. Noah occupies a column and a half of his paper in endeavoring to prove that he was very patriotic in resigning his office, when he was requested to do so by the President.

The New Orleans Bee feels confident of the success of J. B. Dawson, the democratic candidate for Governor of that state, at the approaching election.

Jefferson and Jackson.—It is somewhat amusing to witness the trouble which some people take to make people believe that General Jackson does not act upon the principles of Mr Jefferson. These efforts, generally, it is presumed, are made by young men, who know nothing of Mr Jefferson's administration, but what they have heard from their fathers. In his prospectus, Mr Duane says—No other President has so constantly, faithfully, and earnestly, pursued the principles and policy of Thomas Jefferson, as Andrew Jackson. He has said so a hundred times.

The above extract is from the Boston Courier of yesterday, and fully does it speak the real feelings and opinions of the old federal party. It is indeed true, that the young men who are vainly endeavoring to make the people believe that General Jackson does not act upon the principles of Mr Jefferson, know very little of the administration of the former, either from their own observation, or from "what they have heard from their fathers." They know two things, however, which are sufficient to exercise a controlling influence over their political actions: they know that Mr Jefferson's memory is so universally esteemed and revered, that it would be political suicide in them to attempt to stem the current of its popularity—and they know too, that the political principles upon which General Jackson has always practiced, are directly the reverse of those they "heard from their fathers," the black cockade federalists, who fell with the first Adams, and sought to rise with the second. Knowing these two things, prudence dictates that they should gratify their malignity by abusing Jackson, without endangering the little power and influence which they possess, by assailing the posthumous fame of his great prototype, the immortal Jefferson. The Courier is bolder, and more heedless of consequences—indeed, we may say, more honest—for being, in truth, deadly hostile to the principles which have been sanctioned by these two worthies, it consistently attacks them both; not caring to conceal under the veil of expediency, its hatred of democracy, by whomsoever professed and practiced. If the remainder of the opposition presses would be equally frank, it would place the present political contest in its true light—for it is, in fact, a contest between the principles of Mr Jefferson, fully carried out, and those of the party by which he was unsuccessfully opposed, equally well developed. The question is, whether the people, or the aristocracy, shall rule—whether principles, or gold, shall govern the republic—and whether liberty, or slavery, shall be the portion of its citizens. The Bank is the deity of the opposition, because its every principle and action tends to wrest the rights of the people from their grasp, and merge them in the hands of a degenerate aristocracy, thirsting for office and emolument, without ability to deserve the one, or industry to obtain the other.

Memory of Lafayette.—The following gentlemen were on Saturday appointed by the House, on the Joint Committee of the two Houses, to consider and report by what token of respect and affection it may be proper for the Congress of the United States to express the deep sensibility of the nation on the event of the decease of General LAFAYETTE:—

John Quincy Adams, of Mass., Chairman—Rufus McIntire, of Me.—Henry Hubbard, of N. H.—Tristram Burgess, of R. I.—Noyes Barber, of Conn.—Heman Allen, of Vt.—C. C. Canby, of N. Y.—James Parker, of N. J.—Henry A. Muhlenberg, of Pa.—John J. Milligan, of Del.—Isaac McKim, of Md.—William S. Archer, of Va.—Lewis Williams, of N. C.—Henry L. Pinckney, of S. C.—James M. Wayne, of Ga.—Richard M. Johnson, of Ky.—James Blair, of Tenn.—Elisha Whittelsey, of Ohio—Philemon Thomas, of La.—John Carr, of Ind.—Henry Gage, of Miss.—Joseph Duncan, of Ill.—John Murphy, of Ala.—William H. Ashley, of Missouri.

An Affray.—On Saturday evening, about 11 o'clock, a small dwelling house, belonging to Miss Hannah Apple, situated in North Main street Providence, and inhabited by nearly twenty blacks of doubtful characters, was assailed by some ten or a dozen men. In a few moments, all the windows were broken, the house unroofed, and some other damage done. They then immediately retired, eluding any contact with the watch, or other city authorities.

It is an old axiom, and one that is not likely to be soon proved false, that "common report is a common liar." The Mobile Advertiser illustrates the fact by stating that a report started from Manchester (Miss.) that among the slaves on one plantation near that place, about 6 cases of Cholera had occurred—Manchester being a place somewhat obscure, the story took up its journey for the big to wns. At Cincinnati the number was enlarged to 16—the increase was 106 in the next breathing place, and now it is flying from one of the eastern cities to another, like a shuttlecock in a parlor, to the measure of 116.

The Tennessee State Convention, now in session at Nashville, have had the subject of slave emancipation under consideration, and have appointed a committee of four to take the petitions in hand, and report to the convention the reason why the subject should not be interfered with.

The President has issued a general order, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, directing "the same honors to be rendered to Lafayette, as were observed upon the decease of Washington, the Father of his Country."

Robbery.—Jacques Gaudouin, the Porter of the Canal and Banking Company, New Orleans, robbed the Bank on the 6th inst. of about $41,000. He has been taken, and all the money recovered but $1,500.

The Portland Theatre will open for a short season on the 4th of July.

A Ship Burnt.—We learn from Captain Leavitt, from Savannah, that the ship Hull, Knox, of Boston, took fire about 5 o'clock on the morning of the 16th instant, while at anchor in Savannah river. She had on board 934 bales of cotton, bound to Liverpool. The vessel burnt so fast that they had to scuttle her. About 23 bales of cotton were saved in a sound condition—the residue injured.—N. Y. Com.

Later from Havana.—By the arrival of the brig Dromo, we have received a file of Havana papers to the 15th of June. The U. S. schooner Grampus, Commandant White, arrived at Havana on the 12th of June, from Matanzas—officers and crew all well.—Ib.

A new steambot on the Burden principle, was launched at Brockville, Canada. She is intended to test the practicability of navigating the rapids of the St. Lawrence.

POLICE COURT.

Licentious Engravings, &c.—It appears, by disclosures which have taken place in the Police Court, during the two last days, that the sale and exhibition of obscene prints prevails in this city to an alarming extent, and several persons, detected in these practices, have been held to answer for the offence, in exemplary bonds. It also appears that there exists a committee, of some reform society, whose duty it is to ferret out these offenders against good morals, and that Messrs Deacon Grant, Lambert, Tuckerman, and Reynolds, constitute a part, or the whole of this committee: the manner in which they have discharged their duty, will be well understood by the facts which transpired on the examination of WILLIAM S. PENDLETON, one of our most respectable and estimable citizens, was charged with having furnished a lithographed stone, on which a grossly indecent picture was drawn, and from which other copies were to be printed.

One of the witnesses examined, was a Mr Stockton, who is an agent for the notorious, pestiferous publication, commonly known by the title of "M'Dowall's Journal," which has been presented by the Grand Jury of New York, as a nuisance, on account of the disgusting details of obscenity and vice published in it.

It appeared by Mr Stockton's statement, which was not contradicted, that on Saturday, the 19th of April last, he called at Mr Pendleton's store, and presented to George H. Childs, one of the clerks, an order for the stone referred to, signed by "J. Lansing," and addressed to "John Page," one of Mr P's shop-boys. This stone had been engaged a few days beforehand by J. Lansing Burroughs, who was to pay $28 for it, and who furnished Page with an engraving to copy from. This Burroughs, who signed his name simply "J. Lansing," in the order, was employed by the committee to search out the depositories of the prohibited articles. Deacon Lambert furnished Stockton with the money to pay the bill, which was duly receipted by Mr Child.

It did not see Mr Pendleton at all during the transaction. This Burroughs, who signed his name simply "J. Lansing," in the order, was employed by the committee to search out the depositories of the prohibited articles. Deacon Lambert furnished Stockton with the money to pay the bill, which was duly receipted by Mr Child. It was proved, by two of Mr Pendleton's employees—one, a clerk, and the other engaged in the lithograph department of the establishment, that Mr Pendleton left this city for New York, on the first week of April, and did not return till the end of the month; and that he had never seen a proof of the drawing—nor had there ever been an impression taken; and further, that in May, Mr P. discharged the boy Page, for general misconduct and unfaithfulness. These witnesses also swore that Mr P. never kept any improper prints in his store, and that no one, connected with his establishment, was ever known to have anything to do with such articles, except Page.

The examination created a great deal of interest, and, to use the language of Mr Fisk, counsel for Mr P., "resembled a town meeting, more than a judicial investigation," on account of the perpetual interruptions of the extra-judicial functionaries of the committee, all of whom appeared to act and speak, as if they were attorneys for the Commonwealth. One reforming gentleman, who was merely a private member, and "professed himself a humble Christian," though he might with more propriety, term himself a flaming one, broke into the melee, merely, he said, as an "amicus curiæ," without waiting for an intimation that the Court stood in need of his friendship. This adulator rubicund of cold water was especially desirous to free the committee, of which, by the way, he was not a member, from the imputation of having acted an unchristian part towards Mr Pendleton.

Mr Fisk commented with deserved severity upon the "doings of the committee, in employing a person to seduce, by a high offer, Mr Pendleton's apprentice, to make the detestable drawing, &c., for the purpose of using it as evidence against his master."

Justice Merrill, in discharging Mr Pendleton, remarked, that if there had been the least evidence that he was in any way knowing to, or connived at, the deep abomination complained of, he should certainly have sent the case to a higher court, as he thought it incumbent on all heads of engraving establishments to keep a vigilant eye upon those in their employ.

Note.—To show the spirit of some engaged in the present system of espionage, we would mention, that after the examination was over, a person, dressed in rusty black, of sanctimonious appearance, and hand-in-glove with the prosecutors, stepped up to the reporter, to whom he was an entire stranger, and rudely remarked—"The Post of this morning, I see, sympathizes with these blackguards who have these prints."—Those who have read the report in yesterday's Post, must be aware of the wanton falsehood and gratuitous insolence of the remark, and will not be surprised that we peremptorily, if not politely, told him, that "he was relieved from addressing any further remarks to us upon the subject."

Four "Jolly Yankee jackets of blue" on a recruiting voyage in a coach, and rather more than three sheets in the wind, east anchor opposite our office yesterday. The necessary recruits having been obtained, the boatswain piped all hands to quarters; the captain having stowed his crew in the hold, mounted the deck, and placing his first mate at the rudder, (on the baggage rack) and his second mate forward to look out for breakers, he flourished his insignia of office (a large case knife) and ordered coachee to weigh anchor and "go ahead." The order was no sooner given, than obeyed—when the first mate, for the want of ballast, or some other cause, lost his equilibrium, and pitched forward between the wheels, one of which passed directly over his thigh. Nothing daunted, he was about to resume his station, when Jack ordered him to belay, and significantly pointing to the hatchway, told him to "go below, for he'd be d—d if he'd sail in this sea with a lame duck at the helm." The second officer obeyed, and Jack got under weigh again, and doubled the next corner under full sail.

It will be recollected that a package of money amounting to upwards of $4000, together with a number of drafts belonging to some of our brokers, was carried off by N. Sylvester of Philadelphia, to whom it had been entrusted for conveyance to that city. This morning an anonymous letter was received here, postmarked Charleston, June 15th, enclosing the drafts, but not the money. It is feared that Sylvester has left the country.—N. Y. Jour. Com.

Foreign Items.

But few persons, probably, are aware of the brevity of the marriage ceremony in the Scotch law. Lord Chancellor Brougham, in deploring this circumstance, said, in the House of Lords, that a youth of fourteen, whatever his rank or fortune might be, could thus throw himself away, by merely asking a female, "Will you accept of me as a husband?" and she replying, "Yes." The marriage was complete!—This would be a dangerous provision where divorces are so easily procured as in New Jersey and Ohio.—N. Y. Star.

Nothing more strikingly illustrates the oppression and injustice of the British Government than the obnoxious tests required at the universities for granting degrees.—Dissenters are refused, though it is well known that many of the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge were founded by Catholics, and most of them before the reformation! It is obvious then, that the established church have unlawfully engrafted upon these institutions this odious feature.—Ibid.

Mail Robbery.—The Truth Teller and Sentinel, published at Jackson, Tenn., says:—On the morning of the 1st inst., a little while before day-light, the boot of the eastern stage was cut open, and a trunk belonging to Mr John M. Smith, jeweller, of Nashville, was taken from it, containing about $900 worth of jewelry. This daring outrage was committed about one hundred yards from the village of Huntingdon. The robbery was not discovered until the stage had arrived at its first stand. Mr Smith returned to Huntingdon, when the citizens, with a promptness creditable to their indignant feelings, immediately turned out, and after a search of several hours, the trunk, broken open and rifled of its contents, was discovered a short distance from the road at the place above mentioned. Mr Smith has offered a reward of $100 for the recovery of the stolen property, and $50 for the detection and apprehension of the robber.

Distressing.—The Bristol (R. L.) Gazette of Saturday last, says:—"We learn from Captain Mayhew, of the ship Warren, recently arrived at that port, that Captain Charles Spooner, of the ship Erie, of Newport, (whose extraordinary marriage to Miss Kingtara Omurath, a native of Otaheite, has been lately noticed in most of the papers of this country,) was deprived of his bride soon after his marriage, under the following painful circumstances: She had gone into the water to amuse her husband with an exhibition of her extraordinary feats of swimming, for which she is said to have been very remarkable, when she was attacked by a large shark. The shark first seized her by a limb, but releasing his hold, he made another attack, and with one effort of his powerful jaws, severed her body in two! The unhappy husband was a spectator of this awful scene, but could render no assistance."

A Flat Boat Robbed.—We learn, through the medium of a letter received by a friend in this place, that a flat, loaded with lard, whiskey, &c., in descending the Mississippi river, having grounded on a sand bar, about ten miles below Randolph, was robbed of about $1500 worth, by a gang of robbers from the Arkansas side. A company of armed volunteers from Covington and Randolph, had succeeded in arresting 10 or 12 of the gentry, and were in hot pursuit of the others.—Nashville Rep.

The "damned Irish" spirit, which the Bank party displayed so shamelessly at the time of the last election, is by no means extinct. The Courier and Enquirer, we are informed, on Saturday, announced on its bulletin the arrival of a vessel containing emigrants from Ireland, in the following terms:—"Arrived ship Josephine, from Sligo, with live stock, to Francis Thompson."

Mortality at Grosse Isle, (below Quebec).—Mr Craig, Civil Secretary at Quebec, issued a Bulletin, for general information, on the 17th inst. as follows:—"The number of sick at Grosse Isle by the latest return is 141. The number of deaths during the week ending on the 14th inst. was 9, of which six were children, the eldest six years old. No cases of cholera had occurred on the Island."

Appropriate Names.—The following appropriate names may be seen on the signs of three drinking establishments in this city. First, at a considerable distance up town, and pretty conspicuous, is "The Vulture"; secondly, a little lower down, and very conspicuous, is "The Finch"; and thirdly, a good deal lower down, and most conspicuous, is "The Shades." Here, then, is a regular gradation—you have only to begin at the Vulture, and be done upon up at the Finch, when you are a proper candidate for the Shades.—N. Y. Trans.

Pithy answer to a short advertisement.—A shop-keeper in Grand street, the other day, stuck upon his door the following laconic advertisement—"A Boy Wanted." INDUSTRIAL BLACK WRITING INK.

It is known that Chlorine, (muriatic acid diluted with water) when passed with a feather of a quill over writing made with common Ink will destroy it, and if the same place can be again written on, and the date, sum, or condition of any writ ing or agreement be altered. This valuable Ink has been tested chemically, and is found to be indestructible by the action of any corrosive acid, or any chemical agent, which removes the ink must also remove the paper upon which it is written. The property, rendering it inaccessible to the arts of forgers and counterfeiters, is an extremely valuable one, and one which addresses itself to every Banking and other Corporation, and to every citizen of the Mercantile and Professional community.
It is now offered for the public use; and the proprietor only asks a fair trial of its merits.
This Ink is now used in the Office of the Government of the State of Maine by many eminent Lawyers and Public Officers, and by most of the Merchants of Portland, who are desirous to have their accounts unalterable. This Ink has also been ap proved of by all the Professors of Bowdoin College, and the certificate of Professor Cleveland, a distinguished chemist, is hereunto annexed:
"It is hereby certified, that Messrs. J. B. Brunswick, June 6, 1834, have examined the ink of his manufacture, with reference to its power of resisting the action of chemical agents. I found its power of resisting chlorine and solution of Potassa, decidedly superior to any recent ink with which I am acquainted."
